18-036	DOC-BIS-2018-000401	Juventino Martinez	Electronics for Imaging, Inc. (EFI) was previously investigated and fined for shipments to foreign nationals in state sponsors of terror. In a recent earnings call, the Company's CFO made inconsistent statements and became defensive when a sell-side analyst questioned which country or countries EFI's transactions are taking place. Given EFI's past, there is a danger that it has resumed unlawful shipments to foreign nationals domiciled in state sponsors of terror. Please provide true, correct, and un-redacted copies of any and all documents containing information related to EFI's past shipments to foreign nationals domiciled in state sponsors of terror. In addition, please provide true, correct, and un-redacted copies of any and all files and documents relating to EFI that were at any time delivered, addressed to, or in the possession of former-Deputy Assistant Secretary Ro Khanna. After leaving Commerce, Khanna ran for Congress and was eventually elected. EFI's chief executive officer, Guy Gecht, has for years been a contributor to now-Congressman Khanna. Congressman Khanna's decision to accept Mr. Gecht's money has always been controversial given EFI's past wrongdoing. For his part, Congressman Khanna has denied knowledge of EFI's wrongdoing. And recently, he specifically stated that while he was at the Commerce Department, he "never saw any files related to EFI or Gecht." The veracity of this claim is of paramount importance, especially in the upcoming election year. And files and documents relating to EFI that were at any time delivered, addressed to, or in the possession of former-Deputy Assistant Secretary (and now, Congressman) Khanna are highly relevant in assessing the veracity of Khanna's statement.
